
Christoph Pflaum
Iterative Solver for the Finite Difference Time Domain
Method with Application of Thin Film Solar Cell
Simulation

Martensstrae 3
University Erlangen-Nuremberg
Department of Computer Science
D-91058 Erlangen
`pflaum@informatik.uni-erlangen.de`

To optimize the optical properties of thin film solar cells it is necessary to simulate the optical properties of the nanostructure of these solar cells. The finite difference time domain method for Maxwells equations is a suitable method for such simulations. To reduce the computational amount fast iterative solvers are needed.